Forecast For East of England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Friday 25 Jun 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
After a largely dry weekend turning unsettled next week.

This Evening and Tonight:
Any showers will soon ease through the evening to leave a dry night with clear spells. Some thicker cloud is possible along coastal areas, but likely staying dry. Light winds inland and quite chilly in places. Minimum temperature 8 deg C (46 deg F).

Saturday:
A fine, dry day for most with warm sunny spells and light winds. However, thicker cloud could affect the coast and the south later where the odd shower is possible. Maximum temperature 22 deg C (72 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Often rather cloudy, with showers or longer spells of rain. Some drier brighter spells are possible, especially on Sunday where some northern parts may stay dry.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.